The Una

Faruk Šehić

that is my river in her I have recognized myself there where the reeds are the braids of travertine nymphs who in August, when the water level lowers, show their thighs on which walk incandescent swimmers while the summer sun sprays the air

that is my river
swift as a thought of one's beloved capable like opal of changing shades it is a meander in the shape of glittering veins along which sail wood-framed boats and between them flash the polished bellies of fish with scales larger than a human fingernail

her color rhymes with the atmosphere I drink it like mother's milk hidden from bullets, I watched it through shivering leaves of ash and I admired its live azure

in war, a line of the demarcation of two worlds the Berlin Wall of a million drops which we built during Babylonian night watches yearning with all our might to break it down

my earthly star not as famous as the Guadalquivir it still flows through my heart perfectly justifying her name.
